EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEETING

A-DD/S

26 October 1964

1. Mr. McCone stated that people at the White House apparently need some help in effecting a greater control of physical security in the control of documents, particularly at night. Mr. McCone will talk with McGeorge Bundy and offer our assistance in advising them as to the best means of controlling information. (I later talked with [REDACTED] who had called Bromley Smith and it appears that Brom is putting this matter in low key and is not too concerned over the document security problem. Part of this action was stimulated by a conversation [REDACTED] had with [REDACTED] a White House employee, who was concerned over the night storage of documents at the White House. [REDACTED] apparently is a former Agency employee.) 25X1A
 2. Mr. McCone praised the Weekly Intelligence Review and asked that it possibly be given another name as it is much more than a review and should be properly labelled. 25X1A
 3. Mr. McCone had a conversation with Ambassador Thompson and McGeorge Bundy over the week end in which a seminar of top people on the recent Soviet change was proposed. Dick Helms was given the job of following this up by proposing a slate of participants. 25X1A
 4. Mr. McCone asked Jack Smith to pull together a balance sheet on Cuban estimates in view of their difficulties in foreign exchange and the serious restrictions that have been placed on monetary expenditures. 25X1A
